Fiher was used at St. Mary's Hospital Hoboken yesterday probably for the first time to determine whether an able hodied young man who maintained, that he was a deaf mute was really such or just a common faker. The experiment proved conclusively that the subject possessed a rare gift of gab and satisfied the doctors and policemen who worked the unusual third degree that they could tell a make believe dummy at sight when ware Lackawanna and Western Railroad station two days ago while panhandling among sympathetic Jersey commuters with the aid of cards containing "a message from the deaf and dumb," which explained that a severe attack of typhoid had deprived Charles Seymour of his speech and hearing and had driven him to the painful necessity of earning an honest living by selling the little cards the rate of .10 cents per. The deaf and dumb alphabet was printed on the reverse side of the pasteboard. Seymour as locked up at police headquarters a disorderly person and different policemen wasted hours in writing to and receiving notes from the prisoner.

thief of Police Haves and Patrolman Daniel Kielly, the Bertillon operator. had a hunch that Seymour could be induced to talk with the aid of a little well selected moral suasion, and invited Dr. William J. Ariitz, the police surgeon, to engineer the job. James Forbes, special agent of the New York Charity Organization Society and head of the mendicancy department, was invited to witness the third degree and went to Hoboken to see how it worked.

Or Arlitz had a session with the "mute at Police Headquarters and poked all the familiar funny bones in the prisoner's body in a well meant endeavor to make the man say "Ouch!" but Seymour never

When the prisoner was led into an operating room at the hospital he glanced the lare walls and cailing for paper and pencil wrote:

"Why am I brought here? I am rot in reed of medical meatment. This is a to bury the body in the plot of a illard's father, George Hamilton.

Dr. Ariitz wrote: "You are going to be etherized to determine if you are a faker."
"I am not a faker." wrote Seymour, "and I object to being placed under the influence of any drug. Furthermore, I have eaten a heavy meal this A. M."
Nobody ever heard of "heavy meals" being handed out in the Hoboken city prison, and the workers of the third degree were more convinced than ever that the "mute" was an impostor.
Seymour was directed by signs and otherwise to talk mighty quick or strip otherwise to talk mighty quick or strip for the ordeal, and before climbing out of his duds he scribbled the following: "I object to this and will see about redress when I get out." Then he was stretched out on the operhave to give it up.

The doctors begged Seymour as a special favor to quit his nonsense and talk like a detent citizen, but he pretended not to understand and reached for his pad.

"I guess he'll have to have another dose," said Dr. Arlitz, and again ether was a dministered. Seymour's second coming out speech was as follows:

"Damn you, let me go! Joseph Carey teld me he came from Providence. I am just as good a fellow as he is."

"Damn you, let me go! Joseph Carey rold me he came from Providence. I am just as good a fellow as he is."

"Where do you come from, George?" asked Kiely.

"There are gentlemen where I come from, and don't you forget that," replied the "mute."

"Are there any more at home like you?" queried Kiely.

Seymour then raised himself on his right ellow and said, "Dan, I'll quit. I can hear and talk as well as you can."

As soon as he was able to stand the faker was taken back to police head-quarters and arraigned before Recorder McGovern. Mr. Forbes testified as to the results of the etherization and declared that in his eleven years experience he never knew a genuine deaf mute to practice Seymour's game. He said that present conditions in the island insured growing strength and stability to its institutions, The principal needs of the island, he said, were to increase the fixed population, facilitate inner communication and assure a market for products. Seymour told the police that he formerly lived in Richmond, Va., and became a mute by profession because he was unable to get work and had to do something easy to earn a comfortable living. His voting residence, he said, is at 289 Front street, New York city.

Forbes said that in his opinion Seymour belonged to the yeggman fraternity. The mute said he didn't.

Seymour was very talkative last night.

The mute said he didn't.

Seymour was very talkative last night, and apparently wanted to make up for lost time. He hailed every policeman who came near his cell and talked about the weather and all sorts of things. The condemned woman has begun to dispose of her few belongings and presented a picture of the Virgin Mary to Attorney Wilcox and a "Madonna and Child" to a friend in Watertown.

Electrician E. F. Davis and Assistant J. W. Currier of Boston arrived here tonight and went at once to their hotel. Telephoning to the prison, the aged electrical expert obtained the name of of the female assistant who has been assined to aid him and left directions as to her appearance in the prison tomorrow. The electricians will go to the death chamber to-morrow morning, where all who are to participate in the death of Mary Farmer will be reheareed in the parts they are to play, so that when the fated hour arrives all will contribute to the death of the Jefferson county murderess with the least possible delay. The identity of the woman assistant was not divulged nor was her boarding place made known. She arrived this evening from the eastern part of the Stare.

It was the first time Mr. Taft had played golf since the day before his inauguration, and his game to-day was not nearly that the mark which he established at Hot Springs, Va., and Augusta, Ga. The match ended at 5:30 o'clock and the President and his party returned to town immediately. There were many players to the world.

Among those who gathered about the "mute" as Dr. Arlitz administered the ether were Dr. Bryan, the house physician, Dr. J. C. Farr, Dr. Fowler, Mr. Forbes and Policeman Kiely, who held a well sharpened pencil and note book in hand.

Seymour is a powerfully built man of 23, stong willed and determined, and it took some time for the anæsthetic to work. As he was coming to he cleared his throat and began to warple "Who Sang That Song. Joe?" He repeated the line three times before opening his eyes. acting Japanese Consul-General, has been officially notified that a Japanese training squadron will visit Canada early in May. It will consist of two cruisers, the Aso (7,726 tons) and Soya (6,500 tons), under Rear-Admiral Igichi, with a number of naval cadets on board on their annual cruise around the Pacific Ocean.

The squadron will arrive at Esquimalt, B. C., on May 13, and leave two days later for Vancouver, to remain until May 22. The Aso was formerly the Russian cruiser Bayan.

The Weather.

There was an area of low pressure passing eastward over the Great Lakes yesterday at-tended by a few scattered light snowfalls and in northern New York and northern Ohio by light rain. There was another depression forming and gathering some storm energy over northern Texas. The centre was surrounded by cloudy and threatening conditions as far east as the south Atlantic coast and north to Nebraska and Colorado. This storm will move northeastward and cause rain to fall over the Central States to-day. Fair weather prevailed in the middle Atlantic States, thence west to the Mississippi

A rumor that the woman was about to make a final confession of the Brownville crime received confirmation last night when Attorney E. R. Wilcox of Watertown said that Mrs. Farmer had told him in his last interview that she would do so. He intimated that the final story would fully exonerate Farmer from participation and would sustain his original contention that he was absent from the place when Sarah Brennan was killed.

Mrs. Farmer has finally broken down and yesterday wept several times in speaking about her child. "I want Jim to decide what they do with Peter. I am awfully glad Frank Farmer's wife is looking after him," she declared.

OBITUARY.

Col. Albert Williams Bradbury, who was Gen. Phil Sheridan's Chief of Artillery of the Army of the Shenandoah in 1804, to which rank he rose from Second Lieutenant of the First Maine Mounted Battery, died yesterday in Buckfield, Me., of pneumonia. Col. Bradbury was born in Calais, Me., on January 29, 1840. He was graduated from Bowdoin College in 1864. He enlisted in 1861 and served throughout the war. He was admitted to the bar in 1887, became one of the leaders of the Maine Democrats and was appointed United States District Attorney by President Cleveland in 1894. Three sisters and a brother survive him.

William H. Brearley, formerly well known among newspaper workers, died on Friday at his home, 1886 Cedar avenue, Morris Heights. He was 62 years old and a civil war veteran. He began newspaper work early in life and was one of the founders of the Detroit News about forty years ago. A few years later he bought the Defroit Journal, and within a few years he founded the American Newspaper Publishers Association. He was also ohe of the founders of the Detroit Museum of Art and for two years was secretary of the New York City Baptist Mission Society. His funeral will be held in his home this afternoon.

MERCER, Pa., March 27 .-- The woman arrested with James H. Boyle for kidnapping Willie Whitla made an unsuccessful attempt to escape from the train while on the way here from Pittsburg in care of Sheriff Gumbert of that city.

The Sheriff's party and the woman were in a chair car. As the train drew out of Valencia, and while the rear door of the car was still held open by the brakeman the woman jumped from her seat and started for the platform, but the brakeman, seeing her attempt, slammed the door, and she quickly stepped into the lavatory. Before she could open the window Sheriff Gumbert followed her, while Detective Harry Perkins ran to the ear platform with the idea of catching her if she should succeed in dropping from the window. According to this friend, Earle said that he was not surprised when the papers in his wife's action were served on him, but that he had known for some time that they were in preparation. Following out his course in life, which is to let every one follow out the dictates of their nature without let or hindrance, he did not see why Mrs. Earle should not part from him if she so desired and would not place a straw in her way so long as she did not interfere with him. The bond that had existed between him and Mrs. Earle had been severed some time ago and he did not think that it could ever be repaired. Earle said nothing in reference to his son, Edmund Erwin Earle, now eight months old.
